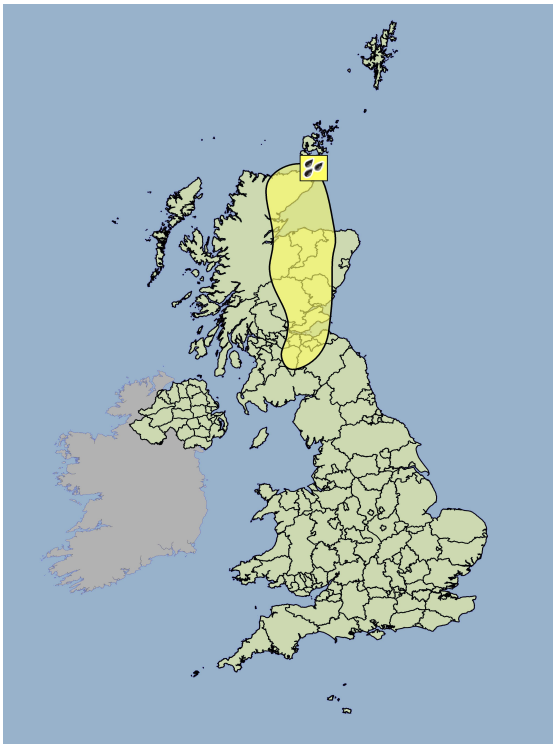
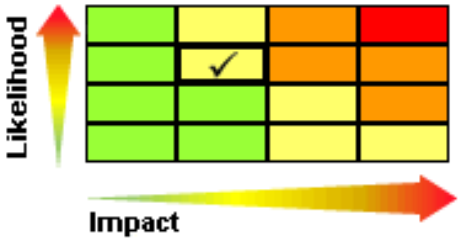
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A frontal system is moving into western Scotland from the west. To the east, very high afternoon temperatures are triggering some heavy showers and thunderstorms for the rest of this afternoon and into the evening. These should die out from the west later this evening.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 15:00 on Sat, 26th Jul 2014 until 22:00 on Sat, 26th Jul 2014

Showers and thunderstorms will develop this afternoon and evening across parts of northern and eastern Scotland. Isolated intense downpours will briefly affect a few areas with very localised surface water flooding possible, giving temporary standing water at prone spots.
